

Outdoor Education Major

The Bachelor of Science with a major in Outdoor Education (OE) combines elements of adventure education and environmental education into one unique program of study. Offering a strong emphasis in outdoor skills, leadership training, and environmental knowledge, students learn to teach adventure activities, team building, and environmental awareness in the context of an outdoor setting and from a biblical worldview. The Outdoor Education curriculum is designed to give students the skills, knowledge, and training necessary to both facilitate personal growth and interpret the natural environment. Students can choose a concentration in Outdoor Leadership and Adventure Education or Environmental Education and Interpretation or complete a Special Emphasis Concentration.

Why Study Outdoor Education at Montreat College?

Leadership Development Curriculum

Leadership concepts and skills are taught throughout the Outdoor Education curriculum. The OE major and concentrations emphasize preparation for professional roles in the field. Students are trained in Outdoor Leadership theory and practice. Montreat College's OE program emphasizes developing students to become outdoor leaders who are competent in using outdoor environments for education and ministry. Through numerous courses and field experiences, students are prepared to design, implement, and administer outdoor programs that are safe, challenging, and enjoyable. Supported by a liberal arts foundation, students will use their knowledge of the environment, leadership, and ministry preparation to point others to Christ.

The campus is located among mountainous wilderness areas. Montreat College is adjacent to Pisgah National Forest, close to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, and within a two-hour drive of numerous climbing locations, four major wilderness areas, and several rivers with whitewater rated up to Class V. Montreat College is also within a 14-mile hike or bike ride of Mt. Mitchell, the highest peak east of the Mississippi River.

The faculty brings a diversity of training and depth of experience.

Professors are passionate about engaging their students and challenging them to be professional, well-rounded educators. They prioritize the integration of faith and learning in classroom and the importance of field experiences. Professors have brought experience from the National Outdoor Leadership School, Outward Bound, American Mountain Guides Association, the National Park Service, U.S. Forest Service, the North American Association for Environmental Education, Association for Outdoor Recreation and Education, Christian Adventure Association, Association for Experiential Education, Christian Camping International, Christian Camp and Conference Association, the American Canoe Association, the Wilderness Education Association, and the National Association for Interpretation. Professors remain current through active memberships. Students can expect their Outdoor Education professors to be beside them, guiding them and challenging them to reach their full potential both inside and outside the classroom.

Career opportunities are abundant. Graduates in Outdoor Education from Montreat College go on to a variety of careers in outdoor, adventure, and environmental education programs; camps and conference centers; mission organizations; national and state parks; churches and church-related youth organizations; expedition programs such as the National Outdoor Leadership School, Wilderness Education Association, and Outward Bound; environmental organizations; nature centers; outdoor science programs; and environmental interpretation centers. Certification programs are available in several different areas. Many graduates report that whatever their career choice, that the interpersonal skills, training in teaching, leadership, and discipleship experiences they gained through the OE program prepared them for all aspects of their lives.

Opportunities for Leadership/Teaching Experience. The Outdoor Education program provides practical opportunities to equip students with technical skills and leadership/teaching experience. The department works directly with outreach programs, such as the Team and Leadership Center (TLC). The TLC utilizes challenge course facilities to develop team-building strategies and to strengthen the concept of community through experience-based learning. The TLC is housed on the Black Mountain Campus and includes a high team's course, climbing wall and low initiatives course. The hands-on experiences that OE students gain build confidence and provide much needed experience to prepare for Outdoor Careers.

Because Outdoor Education requires specialized equipment and supplies, additional course fees are necessary and will vary from $2,000-$4,000, depending on the concentration selected.

Special Emphasis Concentration (minimum 18 credits)

Students may have a specialized interest other than the two concentrations described. Students may transfer a set of courses from other institutions, study abroad and certification programs (e.g., Au Sable Institute, Summit Adventure), or complete courses in other departments at Montreat College to fulfill the requirements for this concentration. The special emphasis concentration will be designed by the student in conjunction with the student's faculty advisor. The advisor and the Outdoor Education faculty must approve a formal proposal of the concentration emphasis by the end of the student's sophomore year. Note: Transfer students must develop and get approval for the special emphasis concentration during their first semester of enrollment.
