INDIANAPOLIS—July 9, 2019—The Growth Coach, a global business growth and sales coaching franchise, announces today that global business executive and business coach Bob Paden is the new owner The Growth Coach of North Indianapolis. The business was formerly owned by Lisa Hudson, who announced in March she accepted the position of president for the national franchise, which has approximately 80 U.S. locations.

“When I met Bob, I was impressed not only by his global professional experience but also his authentic and practical approach to working with clients. As I move my career to the next phase with The Growth Coach, I know our Indianapolis clients are in good hands. A plus, I get to continue working with Bob as he officially joins our team operating a franchise serving clients in Indianapolis,” says Lisa Hudson, president, The Growth Coach.

The Growth Coach North Indianapolis serves business owners and companies in Hamilton and Boone Counties. Paden previously operated an independent business coaching and consulting company TIER321 LLC. Prior to becoming a business coach, he worked in management and leadership roles for global companies including Rolls-Royce, Qantas, Cummins and QuEST-Global.

“Working as a business coach for the last several years, I naturally drew on my leadership and mentoring skills,” says Paden. “Business owners and leaders have complex business issues to manage on a regular basis. Everyone is grappling with incredibly different challenges to move their business to the next level. A coaching system can help to achieve that but should be easy and simple. The Growth Coach system is just that. It gives clients a proven process and framework that allows us to mentor and guide business owners and teams to become productive, balanced and successful.”
