24 June, 2021; Kuwait City, Kuwait: The Central Agency for Information Technology (CAIT) in partnership with Microsoft has announced that it will launch a training program aimed at building knowledge and confidence in AI for Kuwaiti leaders across the government sector.

The program, co-developed by Microsoft and INSEAD Business School, will focus on several topics including introduction to AI technology, AI Strategy in Government and responsible AI practices in Government to improve life and services for the citizens and residents of Kuwait. The initiative will explore how best to respond to the current changes by leveraging AI to enhance the digital transformation position of Kuwait regionally and internationally.

"We are pleased to collaborate with Microsoft to maximize the use of smart technologies that will enable the leaders in the government to take their leading place in Kuwait's digital transformation plan." Said Haya Alwadani, General Director of CAIT. We appreciate the efforts of the Civil Service Commission and The National Library of Kuwait for their cooperation with us to implement this program in these exceptional circumstances. We will continue our efforts to seize the opportunities offered by AI and delighted to have senior members from Microsoft AI Innovation team delivering this program."

"Technology will be a key ally in re-booting enterprises and enable organisations to adapt, reinvent and transform in the new normal. AI is at the heart of digital transformation and augments human ingenuity." said Alaeddine Karim, Country Manager, Microsoft Kuwait. "CAIT continues to be a pioneer in adopting the latest strategies that improve the of government agencies performance and prepare leaders for the age of artificial intelligence. We are aligned to the efforts of public entities like CAIT to support country's vision and create a modern society based on advanced technologies and smart eservices."
