Les Fleurs de CHANEL N°5

Presented by Beverly Marshall

In 1921, Coco Chanel created a perfume with a scent like no other, packaged in a bottle like no other: Chanel N° 5.

Over 100 years later, it is still one of the top perfumes sold around the world.

Chanel N° 5 was unique in every way. The making of the scent was a breakthrough in the art and science of perfume manufacturing, the design of the bottle and the stopper were uniquely different, and once again, Coco's creative mind captured an audience of loyal followers everywhere.

This presentation will reveal the history of the perfume, how the flowers are specially grown, harvested and processed, how the design of the bottle and stopper came to be, and how World War II played a role in its distribution.
