

The Quarry Project, Barre: Dancer and choreographer Hannah Dennison began work in 2016 on The Quarry Project, a site-specific dance/theater piece that will be performed in the Wells-Lamson quarry, one of the oldest and deepest granite quarries in the nation. Dennison is creating a piece, which will take place on floating platforms, inspired by both the stunning natural space and the history of the quarry. The Council's grant will support intensive work on set design and choreography, in addition to a series of community meetings to gather local stories about the history of the Wells-Lamson quarry.
