Community Organizing for Educational Justice

A Community Schools Power-Building Strategy

Community Organizing as a Theory of Change

What makes organizing a unique education change strategy?

Several key strategies distinguish community organizing for school reform from conventional strategies:

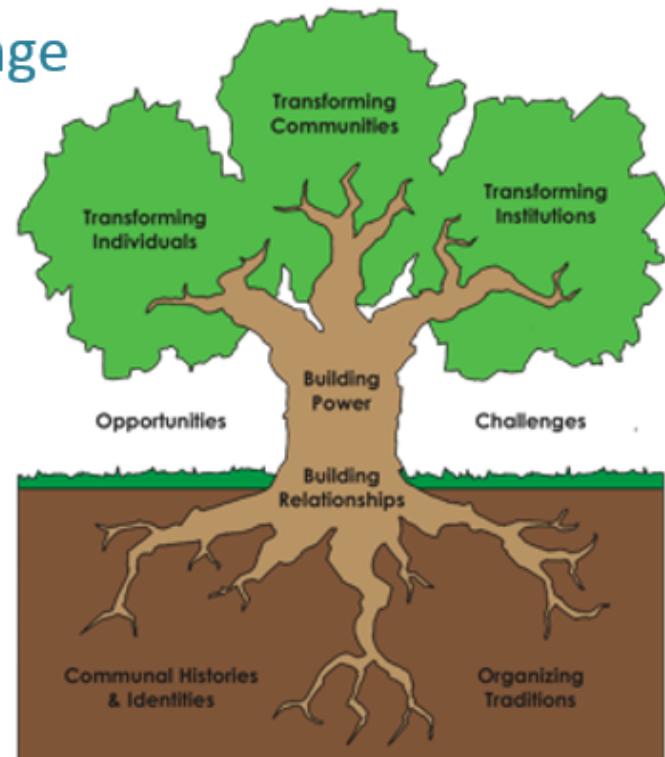

- Addresses power relationships
- Develops political will to advance equity
- Develops relevant, innovative solutions
- Looks beyond education to comprehensive reform on multiple issues
- Builds democratic capacity

Renee, M. & McAlister, S. (2011). The strengths and challenges of community organizing as an education reform strategy: What the research says. Community organizing as an education reform strategy series. Prepared by the Annenberg Institute for School Reform at Brown University. Quincy, MA: Nellie Mae Education Foundation.

Organizing for Student Success & Community Power

- transactional vs. transformational change
- product vs. process orientation
- unilateral vs. relational power

Warren, M., Mapp, K., & the Community Organizing and School Reform Project. (2011). A match on dry grass: Community organizing as a catalyst for school reform. New York: Oxford University Press.

So, how do you actually do it? What does it look like?

- Leadership Development
- Power Analysis
- Outreach & Engagement
- Relationship Building
- Research & Story
- Evaluation & Reflection
- Strategic Action

Organize for What? 25,000 Community Schools by 2025!

If we're going to realize the Coalition for Community Schools' vision of 25,000 community schools by 2025, then we're going to need to organize for the spread and sustainability of the CS model as a model for not just school improvement, but community power and transformation.
