UU Holiday Art Fair and Bazaar Quick Facts

What? A combination juried art fair and old fashioned church bazaar, offering everything from landscapes to licorice, lasagna to literature.

Why? Besides being a major fundraiser, the Bazaar—now our 59th!—brings the community to us, serves as a platform for several of our Social Justice task forces, and gives us a chance to work together for our common good in a friendly, festive, deliciously aromatic atmosphere.

When? Friday, Dec. 1 from 10-7, and Saturday, Dec. 2 from 9-4

Where? Here! The entire ground floor of the church is used for display, sales, information, and logistics.

How can I help? Sign up for a 2 or 3-hour volunteer shift in any of eight areas, before, during, and right after the bazaar. Join the hundred or so others pitching in. Sign-up sheets are in Fellowship Hall or online at (link is dead. Get new link from Melissa's article) www.bit.do/bazaarvolunteers. We need you!

What can I donate? Bring books and White Elephants to church beginning after 1:00 pm on Sunday, Nov. 26. Check the current and last Prologues online for details. Sign up in Fellowship Hall to bring cookies, baked goods, or savory goodies to the Cookie Walk or the Gourmet Galaxy starting Thursday, Nov. 30. We can always use more! See November Prologues for details.

What about parking? Parking will be available across the By Pass in the Marching Hundred lot (at beginning of Matlock Rd), in the paved areas to the west of Fee Lane (where the State Police post used to be), in the IU lot by the tennis courts closest to us on Fee Lane, and along Jordan Ave to our south. We ask Bazaar volunteers and anyone else who can to park in these off-site areas, so as to leave spaces in the church lots for visitors.
