

The Reverend Glenna J. Huber, M.Div.

Rev. Glenna Huber currently serves as the 15th Rector of The Church of the Epiphany in downtown Washington, D. C. She has also served as a consultant primarily for religious institutions in an urban context on the efficacy of community organizing in congregational development.

Before her call to Epiphany, Rev. Huber served in a number of ordained pastoral roles in Baltimore and Atlanta, including ecumenical and educational positions. These provided her with the opportunity to offer pastoral care and counsel to teachers, seniors and parents, and students from pre-school to high school. She also has leadership experience from working in a variety of communities, ranging from suburban affluent neighborhoods to underserved and economically depressed environments.

In relationship to her capacity within the church, Rev. Huber is a sought-after lecturer and has addressed a wide range of subjects, including leadership in the church and in the community, faith and justice and systemic injustice, urban poverty, education, housing, redlining, racism and reconciliation.

Rev. Huber received a Master of Divinity degree from The General Theological Seminary (New York) and her undergraduate degree in history from Spelman College (Atlanta, Georgia).