HABITAT FOR HUMANITY WASHINGTON & DODGE COUNTIES SEEKS AFFORDABLE LAND FOR FUTURE HOME BUILDS

Habitat for Humanity of Washington and Dodge Counties is calling on community members, landowners, and local municipalities to help identify affordable buildable lots in Washington County. The organization is actively seeking land to support its mission of building safe, decent, and affordable homes for families in need of housing stability.

“We are committed to increasing access to affordable housing in our communities,” said Russ Wanta, Executive Director of Habitat for Humanity Washington & Dodge Counties. “The need is great, and one of the biggest barriers we face is access to affordable land. By partnering with local property owners and leaders, we can build more homes and serve more families.”

Habitat is looking for lots that are:

- Located within Washington County
- Zoned for residential use
- Suitable for single-family or duplex housing
- Affordable or available for donation
- Ideally improve (having sewer and water access) or priced accordingly

Habitat for Humanity homes are sold to partner families through an affordable mortgage, empowering them with strength, stability, and self-reliance through homeownership. In addition to building homes, Habitat also brings people together—volunteers, donors, and community leaders—to improve neighborhoods and strengthen communities.

If you or someone you know has a lot that may be suitable, please contact:
