

Little free library at Sheboygan Police Department

A Sheboygan Press newspaper box received new life recently as a little free library at the Sheboygan Police Station.

The project was spearheaded by Sheboygan Police Officer Matthew Heimerl, who noticed the proliferation of small libraries in the city while on duty. The officer created the box as a way to encourage reading in children visiting the station.

Sheboygan Police Officer Matthew Heimerl, background, stands as his daughter Briella, 5, holds a book from the little free library that was created from a Sheboygan Press box.