Meet Bobby.

Bobby was living homeless when he was struck by a car while walking near the roadway and sustained serious injuries.

"After the hospital put my body back together, they sent me to Waterfront," he said, following a five-day hospital stay. Bobby, who'd struggled with alcoholism most of his life, now has a job and a promising future. He is also working toward restoring his driver's license. Bobby lives in one of Waterfront's transitional houses as he saves for a place of his own and continues learning the skills needed to be a self-sufficient, productive citizen . . . without substance abuse.

"I have everything to look forward to because of the love, care, and compassion that Waterfront Rescue Mission has for those who are lost in this world," he said. "I am living proof."

Waterfront is a place of second chances for men like Bobby.
