

Physician Training Learning Group

The Physician Training Learning Group is a learning collaborative for NYC medical residency programs developed to better prepare medical residents to enter an integrated healthcare workforce. Sponsored by the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene in partnership with CUNY's Center for Innovation in Mental Health, the Physician Training Learning Group seeks to create a space for medical residency programs to share and design actionable best practices around two areas:

- ❖ Teaching integrated care competencies, including the Collaborative Care model, to medical residents
 - Differential diagnosis
 - Pharmacotherapy
 - Behavioral activation and other evidence-based interventions
 - Suicide prevention
 - Working in interdisciplinary teams, and much more!
- ❖ Developing opportunities for community-based learning for medical residents e.g., community rotations, less formal partnerships with CBOs

Please join this network of New York City medical residency programs to learn more about resources, training opportunities, and best practices to equip medical residents for our changing healthcare landscape!

For more information, please contact Virna Little at Virna.Little@sph.cuny.edu and Eunice Kim at Eunice.Kim@sph.cuny.edu