

Lee Zeldin

@epaleezeldin

🇺🇸 More MAHA Progress! The Trump EPA has made the important, proactive decision to freshly reassess the safety of PARAQUAT. It's all about gold-standard science and radical transparency for Americans. MAHA has been a leading voice in calling for stronger protections for workers and communities, and the Trump EPA recognizes and greatly values that leadership. We share the same core goal that any pesticide on the market used to eliminate weeds, germs, diseases, or bugs must meet the HIGHEST standards of safety, grounded in the best available gold standard science.

When new science raises questions, the Trump EPA will not look the other way. We will demand the best and most accurate data, and we are prepared to act on what that data shows. When accurate new studies reveal additional risk, we will be in a stronger position both scientifically and legally to tighten protections, require tougher rules, and limit uses as needed to protect workers, neighbors, and communities. When accurate studies do not show additional risk, communities can have greater confidence that the protections already in place are working as intended.

EPA is requiring paraquat manufacturers to thoroughly prove that current uses are safe in real-world conditions. If they cannot meet that standard, decisive action will certainly follow. The Trump EPA is committed to upholding gold-standard science and radical transparency. #MAHA

1:27 PM · Jan 9, 2026 · 135.3K Views