WHO Dinner

FROM THE DESK OF PASTOR BRIAN...

With Confirmation coming up at the end of May, since Pentecost Sunday again falls on Memorial Day weekend, I've had the joy-filled opportunity to read and respond to our 2nd year Confirmands' faith statements... and as I sit down to write this, last night was the Confirmation Dinner when those who will be celebrated on Sunday read their statements for those gathered. Even after two years of study, discussion, and practical hands-on ministry experience, we don't expect our young people to have a fully realized understanding and expression of their burgeoning Christian faith, that's something many adults still struggle with later in life. Our hope for them is that through our lesson plans and dialogue, they have thought seriously about the nature and person of God, what it means to be a follower of Jesus, and some ideas about the Holy Spirit, the Bible, the Church, and how their own spiritual journey connects in meaningful ways.

In other words, the days are long passed when Confirmands were required to resight the answers to The Heidelberg Catechism or to memorize and affirm The Apostles' Creed in its totality. For instance, do any of our older members still recall the answer to the first question of the Catechism: What is your only comfort in life and in death? How many of us would answer with these exact words: "That I belong, both body and soul and in life and in death, not to myself, but to my faithful savior Jesus Christ, who has totally paid for all my sins with his precious blood and completely liberated me from the power of the devil, and who takes care of me so well that not a hair on my head can fall from my head without the will of my Father in heaven."

Wow... did you notice that was just the first sentence of that answer? And I'm sure you realize that it's been several generations since people talked that way, and likely we're all aware that many of us who call ourselves progressive Christians would likely choose very different words and ideas to give expression to our faith and current understandings of what it means to be a person of faith. And, in case you're curious, that's just fine with the rules of faith and practice within The United Church of Christ, which since its inception in 1957 has been decidedly non-creedal. In fact, one of our key values and principles is "Doctrinal Freedom," recognizing that different covenants and confessions of faith are accepted in different congregations, and the realization that times and contexts change, requiring a willingness to "Redefine Faith," understanding that each generation will be responsible for rethinking its beliefs, as God's word unfolds and conditions change.

I can confess my own struggle with the traditional Creeds of the organized Christian movement, as the language and emphases of both the Apostles' and the Nicene creeds no longer adequately express my beliefs and values as a 21st Century person of Christian faith. For instance, both statements go out of their way to call the mother of Jesus, "the Virgin Mary," as if that's her first name or something. To my mind, that designation expresses a prescientific understanding of conception, and over time came to represent a very negative view of human sexuality which has proven not only unhelpful in many cases, but destructive in some. It just feels really important to the underlying Christology of the creeds, and I'll admit it's not that important to me personally.

More importantly though, the Creeds skip over the life and teaching of Jesus almost entirely, jumping right from the idea of his almost magical birth to his trial under Pontius Pilate, crucifixion, death, and resurrection. It isn't important to the Creeds that Jesus gave us the Beatitudes and the rest of the Sermon on the Mount, they make no mention of his parables or his miracles, his feeding and healing, and the compelling reasons that so many of his disciples chose to follow him. As these teachings are integral to my own faith, the Apostles' Creed is less attractive to me than the words of our UCC Statement of Faith, which says briefly that God "in Jesus Christ, the man of Nazareth, our crucified and risen Savior, you have come to us and shared our common lot, conquering sin and death, and reconciling the world to yourself," and goes on to call Christ's Church to "accept the cost and joy of discipleship, to be servants in the service of others," living after the model of Jesus' life and teachings.

So, it's likely no surprise that the young people of our congregation are expressing the same kinds of questions, concerns, and uncertainty that many of our adult members are giving voice to. Like many other people who identify as progressive Christians, folk in UCC congregations are less likely to think of God as male, or Father, or to speak of God with exclusive male pronouns. As many of us have witnessed verses of the Bible misused to limit women and clobber our LGBTQ siblings, we're less likely to think of the Bible as the "inerrant and infallible Word of God," rather than as Marcus Borg describes, a human product of two faith communities, Jewish and Christian, bearing witness to their experience of God and evolving understanding of life in light of God's activity among them. I like to tell people that "we take the Bible too seriously to take it literally."

And like many of us, our kids have no interest in believing in Hell, as it has been traditionally described in many Christian communities; how can a loving God send any of their beloved creations to an eternity of suffering punishment. And while they don't have the words to express it, or the history to understand its origins, they struggle when they hear the language that "Jesus died for our sins," the shorthand expression of "penal substitutionary atonement theory" (I preach about the problems with this thinking from time to time, but it's quite common among so-called Evangelical Christians. So, you could google it if you want to know more). That thinking is only necessary if you still buy into the idea of "original sin," but that too is an idea many of us have tossed in the garbage bin as unhelpful to the point of being destructive.

What the kids have heard, taken in as participants in our congregational life and these years of Confirmation classes, and come to value according to their own faith statements are things we emphasize here at David's and are commonly valued throughout the UCC and in many other progressive Christian traditions. They understand that God is love and see that expressed throughout the life and teaching of Jesus, centered in his command to "love your neighbor as yourself." They understand that that love is the motivation to feed the homeless, and work for a just world for all people, all God's children. And they expect to see that love lived out in the Church, which they believe should be inclusive, offering an extravagant welcome to all. They appreciate that David's Church is Open & Affirming, inclusive and supportive of our LGBTQ siblings, and are grateful to see women in leadership throughout the life of our church, on lay boards and the Church Council as well as in the pulpit and lectern.

They have felt that their questions are welcome and realize that it's normal and healthy to experience some doubts, and not feel that they have to have all the answers. These youthful new members of our community anticipate growing in empathy, kindness as well as understanding as they continue on their spiritual journey, realizing we're all a work in progress. Each one of us doing the best we are able at this point in time and together in the church are working out our salvation alongside others in this growing community of faith.

My word to them in the sermon on Confirmation Sunday is to stay in relationship, to keep coming to worship, to participate in the SIGNS ecumenical youth group, to stay engaged and involved. We all know that growing up in this world is challenging, and can be difficult, but studies have shown that young people increase their capacity to grow up safe and be successful in their pursuits, exhibit positive behaviors and are less likely to attempt risky behaviors when they participate in religious groups and have supportive peer engagements and build relationships with adult role models in and beyond their families. They gain a sense of self-esteem and moral values like honesty, integrity, caring, empathy for others when participating in efforts to make a difference in the world through service projects, peace-making and working for equality and social justice. In short, the kind of relationships that can be made through regular participation in church life and activities.

Our faith, like our personalities, our education, our growth as compassionate beings, doesn't arrive overnight with a certificate, but is a growing organic aspect of life, something that develops and evolves over time as we mature, make mistakes, and move forward in our lives. My hope is that more of us might grow to see the value and the added qualities of peace and love that we experience in our lives by coming together often as the church in worship, in service, in mutual support and celebration. We are better together and can make a greater difference in the world when more of us are fully present and engaged.

Brian Q. Newcomb

Thoughts from your council president –

My brain is always dwelling on questions I cannot answer, so I often need help from others to discover that answer. Most recently I have been wondering what life would be like without church. Why did that question even get in my brain?

Church is a big deal for me. I love going to church and find that I feel like I have missed out on something when I have to miss a Sunday service. But church is more than a Sunday service. I am at my time in my life (retired from the working world) where I can be more involved in David's and I greatly enjoy doing all that I do. I was involved before I retired and that led me to a meaningful retirement.

So that brings me back to my question of what life would be like without church. Let's look at why my brain even went down this path. As a member of the church council I am very aware of attendance and giving. Attendance at David's and most churches came to a screeching halt with the pandemic. We are making a comeback, but we are not quite at the level we were at before 2019. Due to health concerns some are still watching us online. The online service was one good thing for us that came out of the devastation of Covid19. But I was thrilled when we were finally able to meet in person. I think others feel that way, but what about those who haven't come back? Where are they? Did they give up altogether?

Let's look beyond David's and see how the whole world would be without church. Who would be concerned about the underserved, the homeless, the hungry, the environment? Where do we learn about compassion? Where do we learn about kindness? Where do we learn about agape love? This bothers me greatly. I am asking these questions of those who are no longer attending or participating in church. I think you must be the ones with the answers as to how we can turn this around.

I hear all the time that once our young people complete confirmation we never see them or their families again. Faith is a lifelong journey, and it doesn't end the minute you are confirmed. What example are we setting for our children and grandchildren if they do not see us practicing our faith?

As you enjoy your summer on vacations, picnics or sitting by the pool, take a minute to reflect on your faith journey and ask yourself if you shouldn't want those you love to also be on this journey.

JOIN THE LADIES OF THE CHURCH FOR-

JUNE WHO (WOMEN HANGING OUT)- June 27 at 5:30pm

If you have been on any of our recent WHO dinner outings you know that we have had close to 30 each time we go out and we're hoping to have that same response again in June when we will travel to Chop House in the vicinity of the Dayton Mall. The address of Chop House is 7727 Washington Village Drive and one way to access it is off of 725 as it winds around various businesses located there. We will meet on our usual day of the week.... Tuesday... June 27th at 5:30 p.m. We will be in a private room with the entire menu available for us to choose from. They also have an extensive Bar menu for those who like to include that as part of your meal.

AND...JULY WHO- July 25 at 5:30pm

The WHO dinner for the month of July will be at the home of Sue Krichbaum who lives in the vicinity of the Austin Landing Mall at 4691 Medlar Road in Miamisburg. We will meet on Tuesday evening July 25th at 5:30 p.m.

Sue would like to limit the number of guests to 25 and if the weather is nice we can be seated on her beautiful deck. If the weather is rainy or not conducive to eating outside she can move us inside and still have plenty of elbow space for all of us.

An additional detail is that she would like to have finger food like small sandwiches, cheese ball and crackers, veggie trays, anything small.... no casseroles..... nothing that would require utensils. This would apply to desserts also anything that can be eaten with just your fingers.

Sue will provide beverages but if you care to have something a little bit stronger than iced tea or Coke please feel free to bring that with you.

If you would like to join us on July 25 on Sue's deck or reserve a spot for the June 27 night out at Chop House, please be sure and contact Judy Hudson at Cruisewriter937@aol.com or 937-329-2588. You may also contact Judy at church as she has her handy clipboard at arm's length. We look forward to seeing a lot of you again as we have fantastic "WHO evenings" June 27th and July 25!

Mission Partners of David's Church
– This month –
St. Paul Outreach Ministry

On November 5, 2019 David's Mission Board adopted these 4 Guiding Principles in determining David's Mission Partners
Vulnerable Populations * Food Insecurities * Local Impact * Opportunity for David's to Serve

This month's Dateline article features St. Paul United Methodist Church Outreach Ministry who works in conjunction with the Greater Dayton Food Pantry and together they strive to address food insecurity in their 45403 neighborhood by operating a food pantry.

They keep it stocked with items that can sustain life for impoverished individuals and families such as nonperishable items including canned food like meat, vegetables, soup; fruit; dry beans; jelly/jam; pasta; pancake syrup; cereal; oatmeal; mac & cheese; toothbrushes, toothpaste; tissues; shampoo; dish soap; laundry soap; diapers (all sizes); bar soap.

St. Paul also has an active thrift shop. Its purpose is to put good used clothing and household items into the hands of people who need them. The staff at St. Paul long ago realized that most people do not want a hand out; instead, they want to be part of the economy by purchasing items at an affordable price. This, in turn, provides much needed income for the St. Paul Outreach Ministry. St. Paul UMC appreciates your generous donations of clothing and household items. The shop is always in need of good, clean clothing (all sizes), household items, curtains and blankets.

Additionally, St. Paul UMC serves a carry out Breakfast on Saturdays at 8:45 a.m. and a carry out Lunch on Tuesdays at 11:30 a.m.

Bernie Wheeler, who delivers the donations you place in the blue barrels at the Fellowship Hall Door Entrance, has observed recently that the barrels have been very lean. It is the hope of the Mission Board that you'll be as generous in your gifts to help the hungry in the St. Paul area as you have been in supporting the Holiday Baskets and Lesotho Nutrition Initiative. Bernie would be very happy to deliver an abundance of pantry items along with the cans you place in the "Cash for Cans" tubs. St. Paul Outreach Ministry is a long time Mission Partner of David's Church Mission Board and is budgeted to receive $2,000 this year. Additionally, David's yearly Rummage Sale also donates remaining clothing to St. Paul. St. Paul Outreach Ministry has been a Mission Partner of David's for over 45 years!

Look for information about David's other Mission Partners in future Datelines!
Thank you so much for your support of the many opportunities to help those in need.
