HYDRATION: Hydration is a functional IV Injection providing replenishing fluid, electrolytes, vitamins before, during and after all life draining activities. Every day our body loses fluid, electrolytes and vitamins via urine, sweat, saliva, and other bodily fluids. Usually, a normal, healthy diet will serve to replace lost electrolytes, vitamins and fluid. Certain conditions such as heavy sweating, lack of food and fluid intake, vomiting and diarrhea, can lead to inadequate levels of fluid, electrolytes and vitamins within our bodies. This is called dehydration.

Indication: Excessive sweating and exercise, heat illness, vomiting and diarrhea, jetlag, excessive alcohol, skin complexion and more. Your body loses a lot of nutrients with every drop of sweat and it's critical that you replace what you sweat out. It helps maintain the correct fluid and electrolyte balance to stay in the game.

IMMUNE SUPPORT: Immune Support is a functional IV Injection providing replenishing fluids, vitamins, minerals and amino acids to boost the body's immune system. Vitamin C deficiency has been associated with frequency and duration of colds, along with immune system defects. While colds aren't usually dangerous in themselves, they can lead to pneumonia and other respiratory diseases, especially for aging individuals. Colds can be an early indicator of gaps in immune function that could leave one vulnerable to a cascade of serious infections. A deficiency of vitamin C broadly affects the various key aspects of immune function, which include the innate system we are born with, the adaptive system that develops from infancy to young adulthood, the cells that kill invaders, the cells that coordinate those attacks, and even the production of antibodies that fight known infections. Stress is another major trigger for reducing vitamin C levels, leaving the affected individuals vulnerable to infection at precisely the time that stronger immune support is needed.

Indication: Cold and flu symptoms, seasonal allergies, reduce oxidative stress, protect against free radicals, boost immune system and much more. A healthy immune system is key to staying in the game.
