A LITTLE CANINE MOTIVATION

One of our favorite places to visit is Quantum House in West Palm Beach. For the last few years, Canine Assisted Therapy volunteers and their therapy dogs have been visiting this magical place where children going through difficult surgeries and rehabilitation can relax and be kids in between their treatments.

Recently, while volunteer Ellen Springs and her therapy dog Maggie were making one of their regular visits, they met a little girl named Lucy.

Lucy has very little use of her hands and feet, which limits the way she can interact. But when therapy dog Maggie is present, she motivates Lucy to find alternative ways to touch, move and play.

During one visit, Lucy wanted to pet Maggie so she began swinging her arm to gain momentum. She kept at it until her arm finally reached Maggie's tail. She was so proud of herself and squealed with joy.

The picture above was taken right after their very special interaction. It's these little moments that have the greatest impacts.

Any kind of positive interaction with an animal can leave a lasting impression on one's heart. Sometimes, just being in the presence of an animal is enough to put you in a positive state of mind.

When we feel good, we do good. And when we do good, we feel good. It's a contagion effect that is beneficial for the employer and employee, alike.

If your workplace is in South Florida and you would like to schedule a visit with a certified therapy dog on National Take Your Dog to Work Day, contact us today at (954) 990-5175!
