NAWIC 66th Annual Conference

Charlotte, NC

August 11-14, 2021

I am happy to report on NAWIC's 66th annual conference, it was amazing. As a first timer I really enjoyed seeing so many awesome and powerful Women at the conference the attendance was over 400 Women in all aspects of construction.

They had an App so you can plan your days and what breakout sessions you wanted to attend. Unfortunately, due to weather we missed the first day and the morning of the second day, but I still got a lot out of the conference. Including the networking and the construction zone, were all the vendors were set up with good information on their companies and had plenty of give a ways.

On Thursday when we arrived, I was able to attend a breakout session with the Keynote speaker Dave Davlin that presented in the morning. he talked about uncovering the pathway to what matters most in 9 powerful steps.

There was a powerful panel discussion on Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (Embracing our differences is how we unite cultures to build for a stronger workforce.)

Friday brought more powerful break out sessions and more networking. That was the night of the Gala Dinner which was very exciting and fun.

Saturday I was able to attend how to create a PD& E (Professional Development & Education) program that drives our Chapters success, it is important to know we are meeting our members real world concerns and needs. Then closed it off with an awesome Keynote speaker Stacey Hanke Communicating with influence what an eye opener for me. I am going to put in the work to influence Monday to Monday!!!

If you have not had a chance to make it to an annual conference, I suggest you do it was really worth it…
