

Mariah Pasco Finds Her Road to Success

Mariah Pasco was tired of fighting to get and keep jobs that barely paid the bills. The single mom told her daughter that she couldn't have dance lessons or take a vacation. Mariah doubted that she would ever be able to buy a house. Now all of that is possible.

A friend who was a truck driver told Mariah she should get her Class A license and be a truck driver. She worked with Rubicon Programs to obtain a Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) grant to go to trucking school. She says she worked harder than she had ever worked on anything, and her hard work paid off. She received her Class A license and now has a job working locally for JB Hunt with the opportunity to make six figures a year. Her future plans call for more training or to enroll in college to further her skills. Right now, though, she is focused on saving money and having the means to create abundant, fun memories with her daughter.

Mariah says she has never felt prouder of herself or more secure in her future. She is deeply grateful for the WIOA grant and Rubicon and is quick to tell anyone who is struggling that there's always a better way, if you're willing to learn and open to change.
