Meeting the Moment of Crisis:

A Co-Response Model and Philosophy

Co-responder programs, which are partnerships between mental health clinicians and law enforcement, have gained in popularity over the last few years. Co-responders respond with police to behavioral health crises happening in the community, which provides a unique opportunity to intervene at the moment of crisis. Lucy Larbalestier, the supervisor of the City of Boulder's co-responder team, will present on her experience as a supervisor, co-responder, and crisis clinician over the past decade. Lucy is a Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC), an Approved Clinical Supervisor (ACS) and has specialized in providing ethical, compassionate care to people experiencing crisis. She has extensive experience training clinicians.
