

SUBSCRIBE to VIA: Voices in Italian Americana

the semiannual literary and scholarly review of and about the cultures of Italy and its diaspora

Dear reader,

Reflecting on 30 years of VIA, we see a trend is afoot, steeped in content, across so many media, platforms, apps, et cetera. In this sea of stuff, the average reader and writer have been disconnected from the history of literature and the rich tapestry that has come before. Too many stories submitted have been unaware of their place in this long tradition. New voices are retreading memories told hundreds of times before and connect to no one but themselves.

Dear reader and writers, find yourselves in our cultural histories—read wider, read deeper, and through your readings write the future. Ezra Pound once advised, “Make it new,” something that can only be done if you know the old.
