FLAT ROCK, N.C. A unique program of storytelling and music is offered to the public on Sunday afternoon, April 23rd, at the Episcopal Church of St. John in the Wilderness, Flat Rock, NC.

The 4:00 p.m. concert features Becky Stone, a talented musician, actor, and teller-of-folk tales.

Each performance of Becky's is one-of-a-kind, created with a specific audience in mind. As she explains, "I love world tales and bringing the music of language and other dialects to the audience. And there is always the possibility that I will bring an African version of a Bible story."

Becky incorporates music and audience participation in her programs which frequently leave children and adults enthralled.

For over 30 years she has performed in the Carolinas and Tennessee with drama, educational, and religious groups as well as at Storytelling festivals.

Friends of Music present this concert at the Parish Hall of St. John in the Wilderness, located across Rutledge Drive from the church, 1895 Greenville Highway in Flat Rock.

No advance registration is necessary.
