The Chicago Gargoyle Brass and Organ Ensemble is comprised of classically trained adult musicians, and performs a wide variety of repertoire in an equally diverse range of settings. The group has toured Minnesota, performed major liturgical works, commissioned and recorded exciting new works, given concerts for chapters of the American Guild of Organists.

The Chicago Gargoyle Brass and Organ Ensemble continues to remain at the cutting edge of music for brass and organ, commissioning new compositions for brass and organ, and entertaining audiences well into its third decade of existence.

Imaginary Journeys, written for the ensemble by Chicago-area composer Mark Lathan. The three-movement work takes the listener on a rocket-powered interstellar adventure, inspired by recent astronomical discoveries. For this piece, Lathan says, I wanted to bring in some drama, somewhat in the manner of a film score. Lathan, who was born Arlington Heights, Ill., and currently lives in Bartlett, earned a doctorate in music from the University of California at Los Angeles, where he received the Henry Mancini Award in Film Composition and studied film scoring with Jerry Goldsmith.

Short Fuse for brass, organ, and percussion by Chris Reyman, a jazz performance specialist who teaches at the University of Texas at El Paso. Rodney Holmes, the Gargoyle ensembles founder and artistic director, says, This piece shows off a very different face of what a pipe organ and brass can do.
