Leon Ellis Smith was born September 22, 1930 in Rutherford County, Smyrna, Tennessee to the late Maggie Smith. At an early age, the family moved to Nashville Tennessee and united with the Bass Street Missionary Baptist Church under the leadership of the late Rev. Sam Alexander. He loved serving and attending church. Leon received his early education in the Nashville public school system and graduated from Pearl High School.

After graduation, Leon joined the U.S. Army and served his tour of duty in the Korean War before being honorably discharged with the rank of Sergeant. After his discharge, he attended A&I University, which is now Tennessee State University, where he pledged April 28, 1956 Rho Psi Chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. As a member of the NAACP, he also photographed many of their events including conventions. In his passion for photography, at the end of every year, he expressed his generosity by gifting photo albums to people he had photographed including random photos at church and church events.
