BEIT TZITZIT: SHABBAT MORNING AT 10:45 IN THE KBI LIBRARY

Every week, Rabbi Winston leads a lively discussion of this week's Parsha. If you've been curious, join us! Kiddush and snacks included!

Rabbi Winston offers this question to ponder: Tzara 'as is called by our Sages a הרפכ חבומ - an altar of atonement. In reference to the two birds brought by the returning "leper" as an offering, the Sages teach "איגלק לע רפכמו איגלק האב" - the singer (a bird) comes to atone for the singer (person who spoke lashon hara). What is the nature of atonement? How does it work? And how do the ingredients of teshuva and Yom Kippur play a role?

At 9:45, Drew Alexander leads a weekly Parsha/Rashi discussion. If you'd like to be added to the weekly email reminder list, please email Judy at justjewdee@gmail.com.

AIPAC UPDATE: APRIL 12, 2019

Moon Landing by Israel's Beresheet Spacecraft Appears to End in Crash

A small spacecraft that has captured the imagination and excitement of people in Israel and around the world appears to have crashed on the moon, The New York Times reported. "We have a failure of the spacecraft," said Opher Doron, the general manager of Israel Aerospace Industries' space division, which collaborated on building the spacecraft. The mood at the control center was somber but still celebratory.

"Well we didn't make it, but we definitely tried," said Morris Kahn, an Israeli telecommunications entrepreneur and president of SpaceIL, the nonprofit that undertook the mission. "I think we can be proud." Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel, who attended the event at the mission's command center in Yehud, Israel, said, "If at first you don't succeed, you try again." If it had succeeded, the robotic lander, named Beresheet, which means "Genesis" or "in the beginning" in Hebrew, would have been the first on the moon by a private organization, and it would have added Israel to just three nations — the United States, the former Soviet Union, and China — to have accomplished that feat. Beresheet reached the launchpad and was headed to space aboard a SpaceX rocket in February. It orbited the moon, by itself a major accomplishment.
