

How to Talk About Climate Change so People Will Engage

Date: Saturday Nov. 30th

Time: 9am – 3pm

Location: All Saints Episcopal Church, 10 Irving Street, Worcester, MA 01609

Do you find yourself growing more concerned about climate change and the impacts we are seeing from catastrophic storms, floods, and fires? Do you wish more people you know were well informed and engaged in actions to protect the vulnerable people who are now in peril? Would it help you to have better, proven communication tools to discuss these issues and guide people towards appropriate solutions?

With a grant from Province One of the Episcopal Church, we invite people from faith communities and secular groups who are working to maintain a healthy environment for future generations. We will provide specific, practical tools developed by social scientists and tested by hundreds of colleagues in the National Network for Ocean and Climate Change Interpretation (NNOCCI). The lead trainer for this exciting workshop is John Anderson, former director of education at the New England Aquarium. It will be hosted at All Saints' Worcester by Alex Chatfield, an Episcopalian climate activist from Lincoln, MA.

Registration Information:

- We strongly encourage registering a pair of people from your church/organization. We have found that training is more likely to have an impact when participants join in pairs rather than as individuals. Please discuss this workshop with your local group and agree, together, on which people to recommend as participants.
- When you are ready to register, please click on this link. Please ask your partner to complete the registration independently, and be sure to name each other when you register.
- We will send a confirmation to registrants. If you have any difficulty, please email John Anderson at andersonjc37@gmail.com.

Fee: Pre-registration is required as outlined above, but the workshop is free of charge. A vegetarian lunch will be provided, including vegan and gluten-free options.
