

A New Home for Bridgeway's MCORT: Continuing Our Commitment to Community Care

The Mobile Crisis Outreach Response Team (MCORT) has officially moved from its longtime location in Somerville to a new office in Bound Brook.

While the address may have changed, our commitment to providing compassionate, responsive, and person-centered crisis services remains stronger than ever. This relocation represents more than a physical move—it is an investment in the future of our program, and the individuals, families, and communities we serve every day.

The new Bound Brook location provides an updated workspace that supports collaboration, efficiency, and growth, allowing our team to continue delivering high-quality crisis intervention services throughout Somerset County and beyond. For MCORT staff, the new location offers enhanced opportunities for teamwork and coordination. A more functional workspace allows team members to communicate effectively, share resources, and respond quickly to individuals experiencing behavioral health crises. These improvements ultimately benefit those who depend on our services by helping us remain accessible, responsive, and prepared to meet community needs.

“Every decision we make is guided by our mission to support individuals during some of their most challenging moments,” said MCORT leadership. “This move allows us to strengthen our operations while continuing to provide the compassionate care and crisis support our community deserves.”

The transition to Bound Brook also creates new opportunities to strengthen partnerships with local providers, community organizations, first responders, and healthcare systems.

By expanding our presence in the area, MCORT can continue building connections that help individuals access the resources and support they need to achieve stability and recovery.

Although relocating an entire department is no small undertaking, the move was made possible through the dedication and teamwork of MCORT staff and the support of the broader Bridgeway community. Their efforts ensured a smooth transition with minimal disruption to services, allowing the team to remain focused on what matters most supporting the people we serve.

As MCORT settles into its new home, we remain excited about the opportunities ahead. The Bound Brook office provides a strong foundation for future growth and innovation while reinforcing our commitment to delivering timely, compassionate crisis intervention services.

The walls may be new, but the mission remains unchanged. MCORT will continue to meet individuals where they are, provide hope during times of crisis, and connect people with the resources they need to move forward. We look forward to this next chapter and to continuing our work of making a positive difference in the lives of those we serve.
