

HOW TELEHEALTH IS TRANSFORMING CARE FOR THE MOST VULNERABLE IN OUR COMMUNITIES, BUT IS IT HERE TO STAY?

Join the Jewish Federations of North America's Strategic Health Resource Center for a webinar addressing how telehealth is transforming the way we care for the most vulnerable in our communities during the current crisis and the future of telehealth after COVID. Click here to register – and join us on Wednesday, September 16, at 12:00 pm EST.

Faced with the COVID-19 pandemic, Jewish human service agencies and nursing homes around the country rapidly pivoted to providing care through telehealth. Join us to hear how this transformation is impacting how we care for the people in our communities, and what policy changes are being considered to ensure its continuation beyond the current crisis?

Key Topics:

- What have been our Jewish partner agencies' experiences with telehealth over the last six months and how is it changing the way they care for their clients in the face of this pandemic?
- What were the major federal and state policy changes that allowed this pivotal shift and what trends are we starting to see?
- What are our post-COVID predictions for telehealth reimbursement and the implications for our partner agencies as they navigate this rapidly evolving landscape?

Presenters:

Reuben Rotman, President & CEO, The Network of Jewish Human Service Agencies
Don Shulman, President & CEO, The Association of Jewish Aging Services
Elizabeth Cullen, Counsel for Health Policy, JFNA's Strategic Health Resource Center

Moderated by: Jonathan Westin, JFNA's Senior Director for Health Initiatives

Date and Time:
