

Molly Mahar is an Associate Director in Policy Section of the Division of Banking Supervision and Regulation at the Federal Reserve Board. In her current position, she is responsible for working with a wide group of stakeholders to develop the medium to long-term regulatory policy agenda for the Division. In this role, she oversees groups that focuses on longer-term policy research and development and as well innovation policy. She also has responsibility for the Division's policy secretariat, which manages the Division's engagement with domestic and international policy counterparts.

In previous positions, she co-led the Federal Reserve's liquidity program for systemically important financial institutions, served as an Advisor to the Deputy Director for the Large Institution Supervision Coordinating Committee (LISCC) and supported the Deputy Director for Policy in the implementation of the Dodd-Frank Act and other post-crisis regulatory reform initiatives. Ms. Mahar has also held positions at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, the African Development Bank, the World Bank, and the Institute for international Economics, working on issues related to international finance and economics. She holds a B.A. in Economics from Ohio Wesleyan University and an M.A. in International Affairs from the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced international Studies.