

The Future of Residential Electric Competition

Wednesday, October 6 from 12:00 to 1:30 pm ET

(One hour discussion plus 30 minute “hang around the podium”)

After over 20 years of experience with non-monopoly electric retail competition, regulators, legislators and consumer advocates have increasingly raised concerns about the fairness and cost-effectiveness of competitive retail supplier offerings to residential customers, urging significant new consumer protection requirements, limits on supplier marketing to low-income customers, and even complete bans on residential competition. This webinar will cover critical recent developments affecting the present and future of residential competitive electric supply markets in the five New England restructured states. as we move deeper into the 2020s.
