Taylor Bank Awards 2026 For Good Grants Providing $15,000 to Nonprofits in Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia

Three organizations received $5,000 grants to support youth development, financial literacy, and family stabilization initiatives

BERLIN, MD (July 20, 2026) – Taylor Bank is proud to announce the recipients of its 2026 For Good Fund grants, awarding a total of $15,000 to three nonprofit organizations that are creating meaningful change in communities across Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia. Each organization received a $5,000 grant to support programs that strengthen families, expand educational opportunities, and improve long-term community well-being.

The annual For Good Fund grants reflects Taylor Bank's commitment to investing in local organizations that address critical community needs and create opportunities for individuals and families to thrive. One nonprofit was selected from each state within Taylor Bank's service area based on the potential impact of its proposed project.

"At Taylor Bank, we believe some of the most meaningful community impact begins at the local level," said Peyton Goslee, Market Branch Manager & Relationship Officer and Chair of Taylor Bank's Giving Committee. "Through our For Good Fund grants, we are proud to support organizations that are helping families overcome challenges, equipping young people with essential life skills, and creating pathways to brighter futures. These recipients embody the spirit of community service and innovation that makes our region stronger."

Maryland Recipient: Worcester County Child Advocacy Center

Project: Family and Child Stabilization Assistance

The Worcester County Child Advocacy Center will use its grant to provide direct stabilization assistance to children and families affected by abuse, neglect, exploitation, and other traumatic experiences. Funding will help address urgent needs such as transportation, food, clothing, hygiene items, and emergency household expenses that can create barriers to accessing critical services. By helping families navigate immediate challenges, the program supports greater access to advocacy services, medical care, trauma therapy, and other resources essential to healing and recovery.

Delaware Recipient: First State Community Action Agency (FSCAA)

Project: Future Ready: Financial Literacy for Sussex County Youth

First State Community Action Agency will use its grant to launch Future Ready, a financial literacy initiative designed to equip approximately 125 Sussex County youth with practical money management skills. Through existing youth programs, participants will learn age-appropriate concepts such as budgeting, saving, banking, responsible spending, goal setting, and financial independence. The initiative also incorporates a whole-family approach, creating opportunities for parents and caregivers to reinforce financial education and promote long-term household stability.

Virginia Recipient: Community Development Training Center

Project: FUEL Academy (Financial Understanding, Entrepreneurship, and Leadership for Youth)

The Community Development Training Center will use its grant to implement Project FUEL Academy, an eight-week youth development program serving children ages 8 to 14 from limited-resource families. The program combines financial literacy, entrepreneurship, career exploration, leadership development, and public speaking through interactive workshops, hands-on activities, community tours, and family engagement opportunities. Participants will strengthen critical life skills while exploring future career pathways and showcasing their accomplishments during a culminating Family Celebration and Youth Showcase.

Through the For Good Fund, Taylor Bank continues its longstanding commitment to supporting organizations that enhance the quality of life throughout the communities it serves. By investing in programs that empower youth, strengthen families, and promote financial well-being, the bank seeks to help build stronger, more resilient communities across the Delmarva region.
