Cameron has been practicing law since 1996, first in the area of personal injury litigation, and the last ten years in the areas of estate planning, estate administration, and small business. Not a native of Minnesota, in 1986 he arrived in Northfield to attend Saint Olaf College. He liked the school well enough to stay all four years, but not well enough to give Lutefisk a try. Law school at the now named Mitchell Hamline School of Law followed and 24 years later Cameron has accepted that Minnesota is home.

Currently, Cameron and his wife Sharon have figured out how to practice law together and remain married. An avid soccer fan, it is fortunate that his two children (ages 21 and 17) also enjoy playing and watching the game. Now that his knees are shot, Cameron enjoys learning how to drive cars fast on a racetrack.
