Course Description

Mary Frances Price, elder law attorney with Long, Reher, Hanson and Price, PA, will share her experience working with aging clients regarding how to assist them with evaluating the various types of senior housing available in including, assisted living, memory care, and nursing homes. She will also discuss how you can become better informed about the legal licensing differences in the elder law and elder care arena and why it matters to your client. Mary Frances will go on to describe the various public and private sources people use in combination to pay for long-term care and other unreimbursed medical expenses including eligibility factors such as assets limits, military service record, treatment of spousal income and characterization of exempt and available assets; and finally to understand legally permissible advanced planning strategies for asset protection, income protection for a well-spouse and how to position assets in light of current Medicaid and Veterans Rules and Laws.
