

New Website Designed to Delight

Improved User Experience Ignites Redesign

Trauma Recovery Humanitarian Assistance Programs introduced a new website earlier this month with the ambition of delighting their clinician, host agency and volunteer community. Specifically, the redesign seeks to improve user experience with more convenience and access to important content, resources and tools. Trauma Recovery realized that their users were increasingly accessing the web through mobile devices and that smaller screens and “on-the-go” computing meant users needed to find what they were looking for at a glance. This led to a complete overhaul of site architecture, functionality, content and page layouts. The result is a streamlined contemporary look, simplified navigation, new functionality and content.

Training Schedule

Due to Covid-19 social distancing safety considerations, all on-site training will now be conducted as virtual on-line training until further notice.

Key Features Improve User Access, Convenience

The new site provides quick access to training, volunteer and Trauma Recovery Network® information as well as new functionality to rapidly find the training event, volunteer opportunity or local TRN® users maybe searching for.

- Training content has been organized into two categories: (1) on-site and live virtual EMDR sessions, and (2) Distance Learning – our recorded, on-demand workshops. EMDR training sessions have been broken into Basic and Advanced categories and are now searchable by type of event, state and date, to aid users deciding on registration.

- The Volunteer area helps clinicians understand the opportunities to help treat trauma beyond their own practice - from knowledge sharing in our community on social networks, to Amazon purchases to a more involved role as a Trauma Recovery volunteer.
- The TRN® area has been simplified to explain what the TRNs do, how to start a TRN or find a local TRN to join and support trauma healing to victims of disaster, violence and the loss and anxiety caused by the pandemic.

New Content Keeps Our Community In the Know

The new website puts Trauma Recovery's Faculty Academy, News, and International work and relationships, front and center in the top navigation menu.
