

SDI Announces Newly Updated and Expanded Translations of Its Crossover Program

Scuba Diving International (SDI) is proud to announce the release of an updated and newly translated version of its professional Crossover program, designed to make it easier than ever for dive professionals from other recognized training agencies to join the SDI system. The updated materials are now available globally, reflecting SDI's continued commitment to accessibility, instructor development, and international growth.

The SDI Crossover program provides a pathway for Divemasters, Assistant Instructors, and Instructors who are currently active with another recognized certification agency to transition their professional credentials to SDI. The program introduces candidates to SDI teaching philosophy, standards, and course structure while recognizing equivalent experience and certifications obtained through other organizations.

With this update, SDI has refreshed the course structure and expanded language availability, ensuring that professionals worldwide can access the program in their native language. These updates support SDI's global instructor network and reinforce the organization's long-standing mission to provide modern, flexible training solutions for dive professionals and training facilities.

The newly updated crossover materials emphasize clarity, streamlined administrative processes, and improved instructional guidance. Candidates are guided through the familiarization of SDI's digital tools, standards, and professional workflow, enabling them to integrate seamlessly into the SDI system while maintaining the experience they have built within the diving industry.

"Professional instructors are the backbone of the diving community," said Thomas Powell of SDI Industry Relations. "By expanding translations and refining the crossover process, we are making it easier for experienced professionals to join the SDI family while maintaining the high instructional standards our organization is known for."

Scuba Diving International, the recreational arm of Technical Diving International, serves divers and professionals worldwide and is recognized by major international training bodies including the Recreational Scuba Training Council (RSTC). Through continuous updates to its training materials and eLearning systems, SDI ensures that instructors have access to the most current educational resources available in the industry.

The updated SDI Crossover program is now available through SDI training facilities and instructors worldwide.
