BENEATH THE SEA

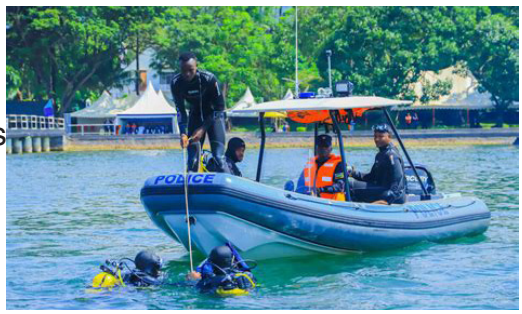

A non-Profit, our Mission is Education, our subject:
The Oceans of our World

Beneath the Sea's 47th Anniversary Exposition

Presents a Symposium for Public Safety Divers:

How to Work Together

In situations like drowning or vehicle recovery, police officers coordinate with dive teams to ensure a swift response. The police provide initial assessments and secure the scene, while divers execute the underwater search. Police often rely on divers to recover submerged evidence crucial for investigations. This includes weapons, vehicles, or other items that may aid in solving crimes. Both police officers and public safety divers undergo rigorous training. Officers may receive basic diving training, while divers are trained in search patterns, evidence handling, and safety protocols in challenging environments. In many regions, multiple law enforcement agencies may not have their own dive teams. They collaborate through agreements, allowing one agency's dive team to assist others in need.

This daylong program will demonstrate New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts State Police work together and how Public Safety Divers may work with them.

Joe Steyer, Ulster County Sheriff Office -
How to Work with Multiple Departments Including Fire, Police, and Coast Guard to name a few.

Skeeter Porter
Discusses Newest Technology on Side Scan Sonar

Kyle Garrett
Newly designed program creating a hub for dive departments to put their information, diver records and profiles in. Kyle will be giving the program away to everyone who is at the talk.

Peter Gannonf, Diver Rescue International
How To Get Teams to Work with Different Trainers.

Walt "Butch" Hendrick and Andrea Zaferes
What to Do When It All Goes Wrong

 Seminars run from 9am to 4pm and include lunch Price $110