CAEA Secondary Teacher of the Year

"It's November and the CASHS music wing is hopping. Choristers, Jazz Band, Miriness and Steel Band are out every other day and our young musicians are preparing for district auditions. Concerts also are being prepared.

Elizabeth Stahl just sat down to eat lunch – a student walks in to ask for help with his district music. She immediately drops her half-eaten lunch to walk into the choral room and play piano for him. The next period, during her prep another student walks in with the same request. Down goes her work and up she goes into the choral room.

This happens all of the time: before school, after school, during lunch, during her prep and sometimes even as she walking down the hall to take something to the office.

On top of all of her normal day-to-day duties, this past year she also fought to keep a well-balanced concert program, which includes both sacred and secular music, and she's led several International Bachelorette students to pass all of their IB exams.

If you have a chance to see her conduct during a concert, you will see the passion she feels for music, which shows through her students' performance as well. It takes an amazing teacher to lead students to create beautiful music.

We in the CASD music department are so very privileged to work with this amazingly talented teacher. And I'm so glad to share an office with her as she also has the best parenting advice. “
