

Classical Education Parent Night

"Cultivating Life, Liberty, and Happiness: At Home & Beyond"

Please join us for the 10th Annual Classical Education Parent Night on Wednesday, October 14. "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness"...these are words American children learn from their earliest lessons about the Revolution and what it means to be American. But what do these ideas really mean? Do they hold the same meaning today as they did when they were written two-hundred fifty years ago? Your child's classical education equips them to engage with these questions in a meaningful way..

Featuring Keynote Speaker
Angel Adams Parham

Angel Adams Parham is Associate Professor of Sociology and senior fellow at the Institute for Advanced Studies in Culture (IASC) at the University of Virginia. She works in the area of historical sociology, engaging in research and writing that examine the past in order to better understand how to live well in the present and envision wisely for the future.

In addition to this research, she is active in public-facing teaching and scholarship where she provides resources and training for K-12 educators who are looking to better integrate Black writers and Black history into their teaching. She is the author of The Black Intellectual Tradition: Reading Freedom in Classical Literature. Parham's public-facing work has also led her to become the co-founder and executive director of Nyansa Classical Community, an educational organization which provides curricula and programming designed to connect with students from diverse backgrounds, inviting them to take part in the Great Conversation, cultivate the moral imagination, and pursue truth, goodness, and beauty.
