July 2021

Namaste'

If you've had the opportunity to participate in any of my Yin Yoga classes (Thursdays at 4pm!!), you'll know that I generally bring in readings from poets, modern spiritual writers, and yoga philosophy. Not too long ago, over several of our Yin classes, I explored the four Purusharthas, or aims of human existence. These four aims are Dharma: truth, duty, or right living; Artha: economic values, wealth, or financial security; Kama: longing, wish, or the desire for pleasure, and Moksha: release, liberation, or freedom.

As we come upon the 4th of July, I've been drawn to consider this concept of Moksha and how it relates to the freedom we will be celebrating on Independence Day. In a blog post for Chopra.com, Roger Gabriel writes that "Moksha is your true nature. It is who you really are." Free... that is who we really are. Gabriel goes on to say that this freedom includes such things as emancipation, liberation, self-realization, and self-knowledge, as well as "access to our full human potential of creativity, compassion, and understanding."

Moksha, however, doesn't just automatically happen. It is a result of the three previous Purusharthas. Each supports the other: Right living allows us to earn enough to be comfortable and secure, being comfortable and secure allows us to explore the things that bring us pleasure and joy—All three together bring us closer to our true nature—to freedom.

As you prepare to celebrate this coming weekend, I invite you to contemplate these four aims of life with me. How do you see them in your own life? And maybe on this Sunday, the 4th of July, take just a moment to consider the relationship between these four aims and all that Independence Day represents to us as a community.

Wishing you a safe and happy 4th!

with peace and love,
Jennifer

Bridging the Gap: Harnessing the Power of the Breath

Sunday, July 18 | 12 - 2pm

The simple practice of breathing lies at the heart of yoga. It is the bridge between the body, mind, and spirit. Yet so often we find our breath elusive, strained, and challenged. In this workshop, we will start by exploring our individual breath prints, then touch on the basic anatomy of our breath. Afterwards, we will use simple yoga techniques and movements to unlock the potential of our breath.

Have a Safe and Happy 4th of July!!

We'll be here all weekend...

No schedule changes at all.

Stay Connected!

Letting go gives us freedom, and freedom is the only condition for happiness. If, in our heart, we still cling to anything - anger, anxiety, or possessions - we cannot be free.
