

INTERSECTION OF RACE AND GENDER

November 17, 2019

4:00-6:00 PM

In this facilitated conversation groups will obtain a high level explanation of the transformation of the feminist movement from one that addressed white female issues to a more inclusive discussion of issues through intersectional feminism. Groups will review and discuss traditional feminist discussions followed by racial issues that are also female issues when explored more deeply.

Facilitators

Shelley Cavalieri is a feminist legal scholar at the University of Toledo whose work focuses on the construction of women's legal agency under the constraints of patriarchy

RaShya Ghee is a staff attorney at Advocating Opportunity, a legal advocacy program dedicated to representing human trafficking victims, and an adjunct professor at the University of Toledo Law School.

Sponsored by the Commission on Racial Understanding of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio
