Reflection from Father Jason

---

“Let go and let God!” I was serving as a hospital chaplain the first time I heard this phrase; we were in the chaplain’s office in the basement of the hospital, and it was proclaimed by one of the Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) mentors who was doing a three-year hitch as a chaplain. It was her response to one of the summer student’s complaints about how hard it was to be a hospital chaplain. “Yes!,” I thought, “Let go and let God handle it!” It was a novel concept, this idea of letting God take control of my life - of handing control over to my creator and redeemer, and letting Him sustain me so I could focus on what was in front of me. The idea hadn’t come up in my discernment process or first year of seminary, and at first I thought that Lenora had coined the phrase, if not the concept...

It was tight quarters in the chaplain’s office; there were the three, three-year chaplains who were working to become CPE supervisors, and nine seminarians who were doing their 10 week, mandated tour of duty in the hospital. Our one Roman Catholic dropped out after the first week, which left us with varying degrees of protestants. Lenora was a member of the Church of the Brethren; she was cheerful but not saccharin, and wise without being pedantic or smug. She genuinely liked to help people, and while she wasn’t afraid to admit when things were difficult or soul wrenching, she didn’t mire in it either. She didn’t just say “Let go and let God,” she lived it. The first time I heard her say it I didn’t notice the Missouri Synod Lutherans smirking, but Lenora said it a lot, and as she said it, I noticed it wasn’t just the MSLs that were smirking, it was most of the seminarians. I let myself be swayed by their distaste for the phrase and practice of giving control to God; I remember one of them saying, “I wish she would just stitch that dumb saying on a pillow and be done with it.” Dumb saying? “Oh yeah, totally dumb,” replied the Presbyterian chaplain. “It’s like, ‘I don’t know the answer or how to deal with what’s going on in my life, so I’m just going to put my head in the sand and say that I’m giving it to God.’ Just a bunch of garbage in my opinion.” I didn’t like that at all - I didn’t want to put my head in the sand; this wasn’t a time for doing that, this was a time to be asking all of the questions—and demanding answers!

When I returned to seminary that fall, I learned just how trite and awful it was to say, “Let go and let God.” It was something that Episcopalians didn’t say; it was nearly as bad as asking someone if they had found or knew Jesus. When I hear it now I inwardly cringe. But why? Why were the other chaplains so against the saying and concept, and why do so many people roll their eyes when they hear it? Why did I let myself be swayed by the naysayers? Because it’s incredibly difficult to let go of control, or rather, the illusion of control; it’s difficult to trust that God has my best interests at heart, that He will be there to catch me when I fall - or at least console me and help me up. It’s much easier to belittle and degrade than it is to trust and have faith. Most of the people I know who say to let go and let God tend to be cheerful and upbeat, which can flat be annoying when I’m convinced that everything is awful and it’s only going to get worse...not a good attitude for a priest or any person of faith.

My life doesn’t suddenly become easier or less complicated when I acknowledge that God is in charge, but it definitely becomes more palatable and joyous. I’m able to see the trees that make up the forest; I’m not overwhelmed by the neverending list of things that need to be done, and my eyes become open to the good that is happening in the world. I become less anxious and more forgiving, more focussed and mindful of how I spend my time. Letting go and letting God be in charge is not trite or naive; it is the essence of the first request made in the Lord’s Prayer, “Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven...” If we let go of our plans, wants, and notions, and give control to God, then God’s will will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Let go and let God. Life won’t get easier, but it will be far and away better.

From SPES Board President

As a lot of you know, we are in the process of trying to rebuild enrollment at SPES back to our pre-Covid numbers. We have hired new teachers, made some improvements to the rooms, and purchased new carpet. We will be re-landscaping and adding new playground equipment and an awning in the next two months. All of this is great, but the number one thing that we struggle with is teacher retention. I am going to ask for your help with supporting the teachers a couple of different ways. The first is to do a once-a-month breakfast for them. I am looking for volunteer teams (2 or 3 people each month) to do a simple breakfast with beverages. We have also purchased a small refrigerator for their break room, and I would like to stock it with beverages and some healthy snacks. The following is a list of some of their favorite items: Dr. Pepper, Sprite, Coke, bottled water, Citrus Lipton Tea, Diet Citrus Lipton Tea, Diet Dr. Pepper, yogurt and fruit cups. If you would like to help with either of these endeavors, please text me at 662-425-9122 or email pridmorehelen19@gmail.com

Thank you,

Helen Pridmore
Board President

Thank You!

The parish would like to thank those who attended the funeral service for Edwin Porter, son of Lorinda Porter – Guyness. Lorinda has been a long-time teacher and director designee for St. Paul's Episcopal School. Thank you to those who contributed to the love offering of $2300 given to Lorinda.

Look for the St. Paul's advertisement in Report to the Community published by the Junior Auxiliary of Columbus. Revenue generated from sales of ads funds projects sponsored by the JA in service to the children of Lowndes County.

A quote by Margaret Mead is displayed in white serif font with a drop shadow over a background image of a sunset over a body of water. The sky is filled with vibrant orange, pink, and purple clouds, which are reflected in the calm water below. Dark silhouettes of trees and land are visible on the horizon.

Never believe that a few caring people can't change the world. For, indeed, that's all who ever have.
