

I'm Nancy Lee Jose, currently Interim Rector at St. John's Episcopal Church in Wilmington, where my husband, Wayne Floyd, and I retired in 2016. Currently I am also the Chaplain at Trinity Grove, a senior living community in Wilmington. Previously, I was Rector for twelve years at St. Thomas' Parish at Dupont Circle in Washington, DC, and prior to that served at two parishes in Virginia and on the staff of the Episcopal Cathedral in Harrisburg, PA. I have a Ph.D. in Health Sciences and taught for a number of years before entering seminary and the ordination process, retiring as Chair of my department at Baylor University.

I enjoy the possibilities and challenges of transitional ministry. The time a parish spends discerning where they should go in the future is holy time -- alternatives open and dreams are explored and people get to imagine the different roles that God needs someone to play in their congregation. Helping a parish to do this in a healthy, loving, honest, and effective way draws on all my skill sets and challenges me to explore how I may most faithfully assist a community to engage productively in their transition.
