“Social Conditions and Aging Outcomes: Working Toward Aging Equity”

A Colloquium by

Addam Reynolds, Ph.D., MSW

Postdoctoral Scholar

Leonard Davis School of Gerontology
University of Southern California

Associate/Assistant Professor Candidate

Dr. Reynolds is currently a postdoctoral scholar of the University of Southern California. Dr. Reynolds graduated with his PhD in social work from Rutgers University. Broadly, Dr. Reynolds is a social gerontologist whose scholarship examines the role of exposures to inequalities throughout the life course and its implications to health in older adulthood. More specifically, Dr. Reynolds's work has demonstrated that larger social structures, such as racism and economic stratification, underlie associations between early life circumstances and cognitive aging in the United States. Currently, Dr. Reynolds is working on projects that include examining how biological aging is accelerated among those that receive nursing home or home health care, if adult children's educational attainment is associated with own biological and epigenetic aging, and if sexual and gender minorities have elevated risk factors for cognitive impairment. Dr. Reynolds has published a total of 13 manuscripts, six of which have been first authored, which have appeared in high impact gerontology journals such as Innovation in Aging and the Journals of Gerontology Series B: Psychological and Social Sciences. Dr. Reynolds is a passionate and experienced educator, having taught the laboratory section of the advanced statistics sequence in the PhD program and research methods in the MSW program at Rutgers University.
