The New World of U.S. Sanctions: What has happened in 2019, what is the impact, and what is next?

Please join international trade attorney Michelle Schulz in a lively discussion of the ever-changing U.S. Sanctions environment. In this session we will examine the real-world implications of the sanctions on U.S. businesses. We will work through practical examples of how the various sanctions regimes are impacting Texas businesses, and how exporters are dealing with fluid trade policy. Topics will include:

- Iranian sanctions;
- Venezuelan sanctions;
- SDN designations; and
- Russian sanctions.

Speaker:

Michelle Schulz is chair of Polsinelli's International Trade and Customs practice. She advises clients on a multitude of international trade and customs audits, government investigations, and public policy matters. Michelle is a nationally recognized leader in her field, serving as a senior advisor to the U.S. Secretary of Commerce and U.S. Trade Representative on the Industry Trade advisory for Aerospace. She routinely advocates for exporters and importers in federal investigations, fines and penalties, audits disclosures, export licensing and international trade. She has served on the President's Export Council Subcommittee on Export Administration (PECSEA) and with the U.S. Department of Commerce to reform the export laws and regulations to relax requirements for U.S. companies that export.
