PARENT BEHAVIOR TRAINING

Self-Care Skills: Eating

In this training, participants will learn practical strategies that will help them during mealtimes with their children. The goal of this class is to assist caregivers in reducing long-term feeding difficulties while learning techniques on how to motivate their child during snacks and meals. Specifically, attendees learn about readiness skills, how to break up a skill into smaller parts, how to generalize those skills to other environments, and how to encourage and reinforce their children during mealtimes. This parent training workshop includes an in-depth discussion about feeding difficulties and helpful techniques, as well as interactive activities that allow caregivers to practice applying their new knowledge.
