

TBBCF Recognized By Mass General For Its Work Supporting Breast Cancer Research

The Massachusetts General Hospital Cancer Center has named the Terri Brodeur Breast Cancer Foundation one of its one hundred 2017, an initiative that celebrates hope in the cancer community.

In a letter to TBBCF Board of Directors President John LaMattina, Dr. Daniel A. Haber, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital Cancer Center, said the one hundred annually “recognizes individuals and groups whose commitment to the fight against cancer inspires us all to take action.”

“They can be caregivers, researchers, philanthropists, advocates or volunteers from around the globe. Selection is “one of the highest forms of recognition awarded by our cancer center,” Haber wrote.

TBBCF will be recognized at the one hundred annual dinner in Boston on June 15.
