A Word from the Dobe Master

Greeting Doberman enthusiasts,

While the last few years have stressed us all, those who made it to 2022 feel blessed and are looking forward to enjoying our tomorrows with one or more Hoytt Dobermans at our side. I know many of you who receive this monthly are already part of the Hoytt family; and to you I offer an extra blessing and thank you for helping me enjoy a rather unique occupation that began in the mid-sixties. Well, in some ways, back in '54 on my 11th birthday, when my folks presented me with a seven week old Dobe named Poco. Within minutes this pup gave me that puppy breath kiss, and since that moment, with the exception of my military stint, I have never been without a Dobe at my side.

Oh, but really why the Doberman? Backing up in time, as I passed from being a young boy with a black dog as best pal to a young adult with a Doberman, I started to understand the true capabilities of this breed, realizing the Dobe had an exceptional learning curve. Their inherent variables would make the difference between the dogs we had as children and this intelligent creature with a sense of humor (plus the many qualities of a Velcro Creature). My companion actually became the first registered AKC Hoytt and went on to gain titles before and after her name. Formally, she was Ch. Hoytts Poco CDX, but to my neighborhood she was still Barrie's beautiful trick-trained black dog; oh well. Thus began the path that, with my clients' help, has given me a most unique lifelong occupation.

To all who have been welcoming our monthly newsletter over the years, I am both proud and pleased to have my granddaughter Elle Hoytt as my new publisher, and while still in school she already has a following besides family. Now enjoy, and for sure send me photos and comments about your life with a Hoytt. I will be adding personal moments too, talking about or showing our Dobes' great & funny situations.

Dog Ice Cream: a Cold Treat for a Hot Day

Dog ice cream is a safe cool treat to give your doberman on a hot day. Unlike normal ice cream, the primary base of dog ice cream is yogurt, which overall contains less lactose and makes it safer for the dog to eat.

Common dog ice cream brands include Pooch Creamery or Ben & Jerry's. You can also easily make it on your own, with many recipes available online.

Titan in PA

Titan here is seen enjoying a pup cup, which is simply a small cup filled with whipped cream. Most often, they are free and are served at places such as Starbucks (where they are listed as "puppuccinos") and Dairy Queen.

Because it is such a small quantity of dairy, it is considered generally safe for dogs.

Do NOT give your dogs real ice cream. Dogs cannot properly digest lactose, and giving them a product with high amounts of lactose such as normal ice cream can cause a whole range of stomach issues (from mild to severe, depending on the dog).
