

“A Little Faith”

Jesus Cures a Boy with a Demon

<sup>14</sup> When they came to the crowd, a man came to him, knelt before him, <sup>15</sup> and said, “Lord, have mercy on my son, for he has epilepsy and suffers terribly; he often falls into the fire and often into the water. <sup>16</sup> And I brought him to your disciples, but they could not cure him.” <sup>17</sup> Jesus answered, “You faithless and perverse generation, how much longer must I be with you? How much longer must I put up with you? Bring him here to me.” <sup>18</sup> And Jesus rebuked the demon, and it came out of him, and the boy was cured from that moment. <sup>19</sup> Then the disciples came to Jesus privately and said, “Why could we not cast it out?” <sup>20</sup> He said to them, “Because of your little faith. For truly I tell you, if you have faith the size of a mustard seed, you will say to this mountain, ‘Move from here to there,’ and it will move, and nothing will be impossible for you (Matthew 17:14-20).”

When facing difficult circumstances, a common word of encouragement many will give is, “You just got to have a little faith.” When I was growing up, I used to hear that phrase quite a bit. Whether I was dealing with a conflict at school, nervous about an upcoming test, or struggling to make a decision, many in whom I confided would respond with a similar adage about “having a little faith.”

While I appreciated these words and the way they encouraged me to be guided by faith, I would often wonder, how do you measure faith? How do you know whether you have a lot of faith or a little? If “a little more faith” is what you need, how do you add more faith to what you already have? The quantity of faith from one person to the next was always confusing to me. In the biblical story of the boy with a demon, Jesus seems to muddy the water even more. After voicing his frustration with the disciples for their “little faith,” he also declares the power of a little faith—“faith the size of a mustard seed.” When the disciples unsuccessfully tried to exorcise a demon from a young boy, the boy’s father brought his son to Jesus. Before rebuking the demon and casting him out of the boy, Jesus rebuked his disciples. He called them a “faithless” and “perverse” generation. When they asked Jesus why they were unable to cure the boy, he responded, “Because of your little faith.” Initially, the amount of faith seems to be the problem. However, Jesus expounds on this statement with a familiar image: “For truly I tell you, if you have faith the size of a mustard seed, you will say to this mountain, ‘Move from here to there,’ and it will move, and nothing will be impossible for you.”

If the quantity of the disciples’ faith was the problem, why did Jesus say that faith even as small as a mustard seed could move mountains? Rather than instructing them to have more faith, Jesus pointed to the power of even the smallest amount of faith. Which one is it? Do we need more faith, or can a little faith accomplish the impossible? In his book Practical Christianity, Eugene Peterson explains: “I think it is wise to completely eliminate talk about how much faith we have, or how we need more faith. All too often when we say these things we aren’t talking about faith at all but a feeling we have. When we define faith as a feeling—of belief, or of piety—what we’re actually measuring is not faith but an emotion. Faith is not a feeling. It is simply an act of assent, of openness, and often doesn’t feel like much at all. Faith has to do with what God is doing, not with what we are feeling.”

I wonder if Jesus’ rebuke had less to do with his disciples’ amount of faith, and more with their understanding of faith. Rather than giving them the power to cure a demon-possessed boy, faith was meant to direct their attention to God, and trust whatever God chose to do in response to the boy’s illness. The disciples understood faith as the substance that would give them the power to achieve the miraculous; Jesus utilized faith as a conduit that allowed God to do the miraculous through him. Jesus did not rebuke the amount of faith within his disciples; he rebuked the focus of their faith. Rather than emphasizing God’s power and trusting when and where God chose to use it, the disciples focused on themselves and what they could achieve through the power of their faith.

What if faith the size of a mustard seed moving mountains has nothing to do with the power of faith, but rather the power of God we encounter through faith. When the power of faith becomes about an amount of faith, then faith becomes the goal. As the disciples discovered, faith is not the goal; faith is a means to an end. The goal is Jesus. He is our source of strength and power. He is the only who has the power to move mountains. He is the only one who has the power to command the winds and the waves to obey him

(Matthew 8:23-27). He is the only one who has the power to lay down his life and pick it back up again (John 10:18). The purpose of faith is not to give us power, but to be a conduit through which we experience, encounter, and channel the source of all power, which is Jesus.

This week, may we stop focusing on what we can do through faith, and be open and attentive to what God is doing in us through our faith. We will never have the power to move mountains. That was not Jesus' point. Faith is putting our trust in the only one who can "say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there,' and it will move." Rather than calling on God in faith to do what we want, may we simply be open to what God wants to do through us by our faith. If we will, nothing will be impossible, for according to Jesus, "with mortals it is impossible, but with God all things are possible (Matthew 19:26)."
