

Global Social Welfare

Research, Policy, and Practice

Call for Papers on COVID-19

SARS-CoV-2 is a new virus responsible for an outbreak of respiratory illness known as COVID-19, which has spread to several countries around the world causing grave and imminent challenges to the lives of all infected and affected. In response to the global impact of COVID-19 on individuals, families, and their communities, Global Social Welfare is inviting authors to contribute research articles sharing experiences and results (both positive and negative) with our readers who can use this information to inform the development and implementation of future social work, social policy and public health programs. We encourage the submission of both original science and conceptual pieces that would inform the practice and policy frameworks across the globe.

Global Social Welfare brings together research that informs the fields of global social work, social development, and social welfare policy and practice. It serves as an outlet for manuscripts and brief reports of interdisciplinary applied research that advance knowledge about global threats to the well-being of individuals, groups, families, and communities.

Submissions will be accepted on a rolling basis and reviewed by experts in the field. Rapid but thorough peer review and prompt editorial decisions will ensure that quality manuscripts are published in a timely manner and disseminated widely to inform additional research and policymaking on COVID-19-related issues.

Read more about the Global Social Welfare or submit a manuscript now through the Manuscript Submission Portal.

Questions can be sent to Fred M. Ssewamala Ph.D.

40609 • eISSN 2196-8799
6(1) 1-56 (2019)

Published in affiliation with:

Brown School

Washington University in St. Louis