

David Ambroz has more than 20 years working in the corporate and non-profit sector - from Los Angeles City College Foundation, to his current role as the head of Corporate Social Responsibility for a major media company. David has been active on issues regarding foster care, homelessness, and poverty since his own time living homeless before entering foster care. In his free time, he serves on the Los Angeles City Planning Commission where he has led the efforts to pass ground breaking policy. David founded FosterMore, the largest pro-social effort to rebrand Foster Care using all media platforms.