The Promise is a one-of-a-kind musical production performed annually at the Texas Amphitheater in Glen Rose, Texas. It combines a 150-person cast and crew, live animals, historically accurate costumes, and breathtaking lights, sound and special effects, all of which tell the story of the life of Jesus Christ in modern family-friendly fashion. Patrons have called it a "life-changing experience," "an outstanding performance" and a "very inspirational" presentation for modern family audiences.

Since its start in 1989, The Promise remains the largest permanent outdoor amphitheater in the State of Texas. It seats more than 3,200 patrons and is the only outdoor venue with a 45,000-gallon moat and rain curtain. Seen from miles around, the Texas Amphitheater features 40-foot-high walls and arches that tower above a 4,000 sq. ft. tri-level stage.

7:00pm TEXAS FLOOD

The New Granbury Live, 110 N Crocket St., (800) 340-9703

Tommy Katona (Tamas Katona), born August 15th 1984, was raised in Pecs, Hungary. At the early age of four, the late, great Stevie Ray Vaughan became one of his biggest musical influences. It began one day, while he was watching one of his father's videos of the Texan legend playing.

At the age of nine Tommy started playing with his dad's band and was regarded as a child prodigy. In the mid 90's, he had numerous successful shows, as well as TV and radio performances in Hungary. As he was growing up, Tommy's infatuation with playing the blues developed. One day, Tommy's dad told him about the sudden and tragic passing of Stevie Ray Vaughan. Tommy then decided to learn more about Stevie's music and life so that he could follow in his footsteps. During this time he was also studying the music of the old great blues musicians. His inspirations were: T-Bone Walker, Albert Collins, BB King, Buddy Guy, Albert King, Freddie King, Jimi Hendrix and at last but not least his father Tamas Sr. Even though Tommy spent over four years in music school learning to read and write music, he always learns and composes by ear. American blues music, especially Stevie Ray Vaughan's, highly influenced the young player.
